Speaker Biographies
Senior lecturer in contemporary history and PhD in Law at The University Paul Cézanne, Aix-en-Provence, France. She is head of the Law and Religion interdisciplinary research team on law in the media and in social change at the Université Paul Cézanne. Work 1: historical and contemporary relationships between law(s), politics and religion particularly in France and the United States (constitutional organization, legislation, jurisprudence, politics and public policy). Work 2: the implications of these issues in international relations (religious freedom, defamation, freedom of expression, proselytizing). Her current research focuses on the influence of American Catholic conservatism. Her next publication, Rome and Washington from the Independence of the United States to the Cold War, will be available soon at Picard bookstores.

Publications 2010

Professor Crimm began her legal career in Washington, D.C., as law clerk for Judge Irene F. Scott, United States Tax Court; practiced in a Washington, D.C. law firm; and worked as Attorney-Advisor/Senior Attorney in the Office of the Chief Judge of the United States Tax Court. Since 1987, she has been a professor at St. John’s School of Law, and she was a Visiting Professor of Law and Visiting Scholar in Residence at Arizona State University School of Law for several semesters in 2003 through 2005. Professor Crimm was the ATAX Research Fellow at the University of New South Wales in Sydney, Australia in 2001, and she was a recipient of a 2002-2003 research grant from the prestigious Washington D.C. nonpartisan nonprofit organization, the American Tax Policy Institute.

Professor Crimm teaches a variety of tax courses in addition to a class on Nonprofit Organizations and a course on Global Philanthropy and U.S. Assistance: Legal, Policy, Political and Cultural Issues.

Professor Crimm is co-author of a book entitled Politics, Taxes and the Pulpit: Provocative First Amendment Conflicts, which is to be published by Oxford University Press in early fall this year. She is the author of Tax Issues of Religious Organizations, the newest edition of which was published in 2009 by the Bureau of National Affairs. Beginning this spring, Professor Crimm writes a quarterly column, “The Quarterly Commentator,” for The Exempt Organization Tax Review. In addition, she has written numerous articles and has made many presentations about domestic and foreign policies and laws particularly relevant to cutting edge nonprofit organization issues.
Marc O. DeGirolami joined the St. John’s School of Law faculty in 2009. He teaches Criminal Law, Professional Responsibility, and Law & Religion.

Professor DeGirolami graduated cum laude from Duke University and received his J.D. cum laude from Boston University School of Law. He holds a masters degree from Harvard University as well as an LL.M. and a J.S.D. from Columbia Law School. At Columbia, he was a James Kent Scholar and a Bretzfelder Fellow in Constitutional Law, and he won the Walter Gellhorn Prize awarded for the highest grade-point average in the class. Following law school, he clerked for Judge William E. Smith of the U.S. District Court for the District of Rhode Island and Judge Jerome Farris of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. His professional experience includes service as an Assistant District Attorney in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Prior to joining the St. John's faculty, he taught legal research and writing as an Associate-in-Law at Columbia Law School, and then served as a Visiting Assistant Professor and Scholar in Residence at Catholic University’s Columbus School of Law.

Professor DeGirolami’s scholarship focuses on Law and Religion and Criminal Law. His papers have appeared or will be published in various law journals including Legal Theory, Ohio State Journal of Criminal Law, Boston College Law Review, Alabama Law Review, and St. John’s Law Review, among others.

Douglas Laycock is the Yale Kamisar Collegiate Professor of Law at The University of Michigan. He is also the Alice McKean Young Regents Chair in Law Emeritus at The University of Texas at Austin, where he served for twenty-five years. He has published many articles on religious liberty and other issues of constitutional law, and articles and two books on the law of remedies. He is a co-editor of Same-Sex Marriage and Religious Liberty (2008). His many writings on religious liberty are forthcoming in a four-volume collection from Eerdmans Publishing; Volume I, Overview and History (2010), has just appeared.

He has been actively involved in religious liberty issues in the courts and legislatures, as well as in the law reviews. He is an experienced appellate litigator, including in the Supreme Court of the United States, and he has played a key role, in public and behind the scenes, in developing state and federal religious liberty legislation. He has represented clients across the religious and political spectrum: the Roman Catholic Archbishop of San Antonio and the National Association of Evangelicals, Hindus and Santerians, the American Civil Liberties Union and parents objecting to school-sponsored prayers at football games. He received the 2009 National First Freedom Award from the Council on America’s First Freedom.

He is a graduate of Michigan State University and of The University of Chicago Law School, a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and a Vice President of the American Law Institute.
Professor of Law and Head of the Department of Law and Religion, Complutense University (Madrid, Spain). Doctor utroque iure (of Law and of Canon Law). Vice-President of the Section of Canon Law and Church-State Relations of the Spanish Royal Academy of Jurisprudence and Legislation. Member of the OSCE/ODIHR Advisory Council for Freedom of Religion or Belief. Member of the Spanish Advisory Commission for Religious Freedom. His writings, published in eighteen countries and in ten languages, include fifteen books as author, co-author or editor, and more than eighty essays in legal periodicals or collective volumes. His research on law and religion issues is characterized by a predominant interest in international and comparative law.
Professor Movsesian joined the St. John’s School of Law faculty in 2007 as the Frederick A. Whitney Professor of Contract Law. He writes in contracts and international law, and his articles have appeared in the Harvard, North Carolina, and Washington & Lee Law Reviews, the American Journal of International Law, the Harvard International Law Journal, the Virginia Journal of International Law, and many others. He has been a visiting professor at Notre Dame and Cardozo Law Schools and has delivered papers at numerous workshops in the United States and Europe. In addition to Contracts, he teaches Comparative Law & Religion and International Commercial Arbitration.

Professor Movsesian graduated summa cum laude from Harvard College and magna cum laude from Harvard Law School. In law school, he was an editor of the Harvard Law Review and a recipient of the Sears Prize, awarded to the two highest-ranking students in the second-year class. He clerked for Justice David H. Souter of the Supreme Court of the United States and served as an attorney-advisor in the Office of Legal Counsel at the United States Department of the Justice. Before starting at St. John’s, he was the Max Schmertz Distinguished Professor of Law at Hofstra University.

In 2010, Professor Movsesian became Director of the Center for Law and Religion at St. John’s Law School.
Rosemary C. Salomone, the Kenneth Wang Professor of Law at St. John’s School of Law, teaches constitutional law, administrative law, and a seminar on children and the law and has served in past years as Associate Academic Dean and Director of the Center for Law and Public Policy.

She has lectured internationally and published extensively on education law and policy and children’s rights. In addition to her most recent book, True American: Language, Identity, and the Education of Immigrant Children (Harvard University Press, 2010), she also is the author of Same, Different, Equal: Rethinking Single-Sex Schooling (Yale University Press) (selected as an "Outstanding Academic Title for 2005" by Choice Magazine), Visions of Schooling: Conscience, Community, and Common Education (Yale University Press), and Equal Education Under Law: Legal Rights and Federal Policy in the Post "Brown" Era (St. Martin’s Press). She has been a recipient of numerous research and academic awards including St. John’s University’s highest honor, the St. Vincent de Paul Teacher-Scholar Award; the University Outstanding Faculty Achievement Award; and grants from the National Science Foundation, the U.S. Department of Education, the Spencer Foundation, and Harvard University. She has held fellowships at Columbia University School of Law and at the Soros Foundation’s Open Society Institute. Her present research examines citizenship and schooling within the context of immigrant integration in the United States and Western Europe, particularly France.

Prior to St. John’s, she was an Associate Professor at the Harvard Graduate School of Education where she taught education law, school finance, and language policy and was a lecturer in Harvard’s Institute for Educational Management. From 1985 to 1995, she was a member of the Board of Trustees of the State University of New York. She is a former chair of the Section on Education Law of the Association of American Law Schools and of the Education and the Law Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, where she served on the Council on Children. She was elected to membership in the American Law Institute in 2008. She currently serves on the Advisory Boards of the National Coalition of Single-Sex Public Schools and of the Education Law Abstracting Journal.

Professor Salomone is a graduate of Columbia University (Ph.D., LL.M., M.Phil.), Brooklyn Law School (J.D.), Hunter College (M.A.), and Brooklyn College (B.A.)
Michael A. Simons was appointed Dean of the St. John’s School of Law on July 1, 2009.

Dean Simons graduated magna cum laude from the College of the Holy Cross in 1986 and magna cum laude from the Harvard Law School in 1989, where he was an editor of the Harvard Law Review.

Dean Simons joined the St. John’s faculty in 1998, and was selected by the students as "Professor of the Year" in 2000. From 2005 through 2008, he served as Associate Dean for Faculty Scholarship. His own scholarship has focused on sentencing, prosecutorial decision-making, and punishment theory. His articles have appeared in the New York University Law Review, the Vanderbilt Law Review, the George Mason Law Review, the Villanova Law Review, the St. John's Law Review, The Catholic Lawyer, and the Journal of Catholic Legal Studies. He teaches in the areas of criminal law and evidence, and he has been a frequent lecturer to the bench and bar on both topics.

Since 2001, he has been a Fellow with the Vincentian Center for Church and Society. During 2005 and 2006, he was a member of the New York City Mayor’s Advisory Committee on the Judiciary. He has also been involved with St. John’s efforts to increase the diversity of the legal profession, including by organizing and hosting the annual Catholic Middle Schools Mock Trial Program, by teaching in the Ronald H. Brown Center’s Summer Prep Program, and by lecturing for Legal Outreach.

A graduate of Chaminade High School in Mineola, New York, Dean Simons resides on Long Island with his wife Karen and their five children.
Winnifred Fallers Sullivan, Associate Professor of Law and Director of the Law, Religion, and Culture Program at the University at Buffalo, The State University of New York, studies the intersection of religion and law in the modern period, particularly the phenomenology of modern religion as it is shaped in its encounter with law. She is the author of Paying the Words Extra: Religious Discourse in the Supreme Court of the United States (Cambridge: Harvard University Center for the Study of World Religions, 1994); The Impossibility of Religious Freedom (Princeton, 2005) and Prison Religion: Faith-based Reform and the Constitution (Princeton, 2009). During the 2010-2011 academic year, she will be a member of the School of Social Science at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, with additional support from the Guggenheim Foundation and the American Council of Learned Societies.
