Studies at the University of Minnesota\(^1\), and Hong Kong Baptist University\(^2\) have found a positive correlation between library usage and academic performance.

Students who used the library performed better academically than non-library users across a range of disciplines.\(^1\)

Sources: