About The Public Interest Center

The Public Interest Center at St. John's Law organizes diverse opportunities for our students to help underserved individuals and communities. The Summer Public Interest Fellowship Program, one of the Center's pillar initiatives, provides stipends to students who work in qualifying public interest positions over the summer that would normally be unpaid. Students who participate in the Center's annual Spring Break Service Trips around the country support legal service providers that advocate for marginalized and underrepresented individuals and groups. The Center also trains students to participate in court-sponsored pro bono programs and helps students pursue internships and full-time employment in a wide variety of public interest fields. Students on the Center's Executive Board play a key role in supporting the Public Interest Auction and all of the Center's offerings.
