Degree Programs
The Peter J. Tobin College of Business (TCB) at St. John’s University has an international reputation for offering graduate programs that prepare executives for success in the global marketplace. The Tobin College is among only 25 percent of business schools fully accredited by the prestigious AACSB International — The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business. In fact, The Tobin College has dual AACSB accreditation for its business and accounting programs — a distinction shared by only three percent of the world's business schools.

With campuses, resources and industry connections in New York City and Europe, The Tobin College offers graduate students outstanding internship and job placement opportunities. In New York, The Tobin College’s graduate division is based at the University’s campuses in Queens, lower Manhattan — close to the financial center, and Staten Island. Programs are also offered at St. John’s campus in Rome, Italy.

The Tobin College also encompasses the School of Risk Management, Insurance and Actuarial Sciences (SRM), which has been recognized as a Center of Actuarial Excellence. SRM is located at the University’s residential, 10-story campus at 101 Murray Street, within walking distance of Battery Park City, TriBeCa and, of course, the Financial District.
